GIVES PATENTS TO WORLD.

John Jacob Astor Dedicates Ilis Marine Turbine to Public Hoping Perfeetion Will Be Attained.

Col. John Jacob Aster has given to the world his patents on marine turbines. Aithough he might have enjoyed a monopoly of them for 17 years, he has formally turned over his inventions for public use.

Col. Astor makes his announcement in the current Issue of the Scientific American in the form of a letter to the editor of that publication, in which he

"All my patents on marine turbines having been granted, I hereby dedicate them to the public, in the hope that the development of the ideal turbine may be hastened thereby."

As yet no engine has been built to utilize Col. Astor's patents, but engineers and critics express themselves as sharing the belief that his theories will work out practicably.

Col. Astor's invention contemplates twin screws, set tandem instead of side by side, and revolving in opposite directions. In his letter he gives this description of his turbine:

"The turbine is shaped like a funnel and comprises an outer shell or drum and an inner shaft running axially through it, these parts being relatively rotable and each baving oppositely set spiral bladys. The steam is admitted into the outer shell at the small end and passes through the turbine expanding into the large end of the shell and acting on the spiral blades to rotate the shelf and shaft simultaneously and in opposite directions.

"By allowing both inner turbine and he outer case to revolve the speed necessary to insure efficiency, which in ordinary turbines is often inconveniently high, is cut in half. As a resuit of this construction the weight is reduced practically."

For several years Santa Clara county, Cal., sportsmen have been eagerly seeking the life of one partleular buck, to which has been given the name of "Old Whishers."

So successfully did this magnificent specimen of the deer tribe towart the hunters and anticipate their every attempt to ambush him that it became a belief with some that he bore a charmed life. The charm, if any, which hung over him, has been dispelled and "Ola Whiskers" has fallen a prey to the hunter. POWER FROM CLACIAL WATER

Project Which is an Fact to Facuish Light to Cities of Tacoma and Sentile, Wash.

Engineers are being sent from Boston to Tacoma and Scattle, to begin work on a project which has for it chief aim the barvesting of the waters of the Payallup glacier on Mount-Tacoma, state of Washington, for commercial purposes. It is said that if successful this will be the first instance where glacial waters have been used directly to provide power. Stone and Webster, of Boston, who have instilled a great many street railways i all parts of the country, are und rtaking the work in order to provide the cities of Tacoma and Scattle with electric light and power. The plan is to construct from the glacier a flume fourteen miles long, brough which a head of water will flow sufficient to generate 50,000 horse-power. The water in running through the flume will drop 600 feet and through penstocks will be diverted into turbines connected with electric generators, A three-phase alternating current will be transmitted at high voltage to Tacoma and Scattle.
